7. Add the additional details. As you fill out the form, you'll encounter such fields that ask you to enter your cellphone number. While it may seem illogical to enter such private data as a cellphone number, Twitter protects this number and makes your login more secure, as you'll receive special one-time only codes you can use to login once you set it up. Proceed through by clicking the "Next" button. If you don't own a cellphone or still don't feel right to enter your cellphone number, you can click the Skip button instead.

Enter your phone.

Your phone number keeps your account secure, connects you to friends and makes login easier.

STEPS TO CREATE A TWITTER ACCOUNT

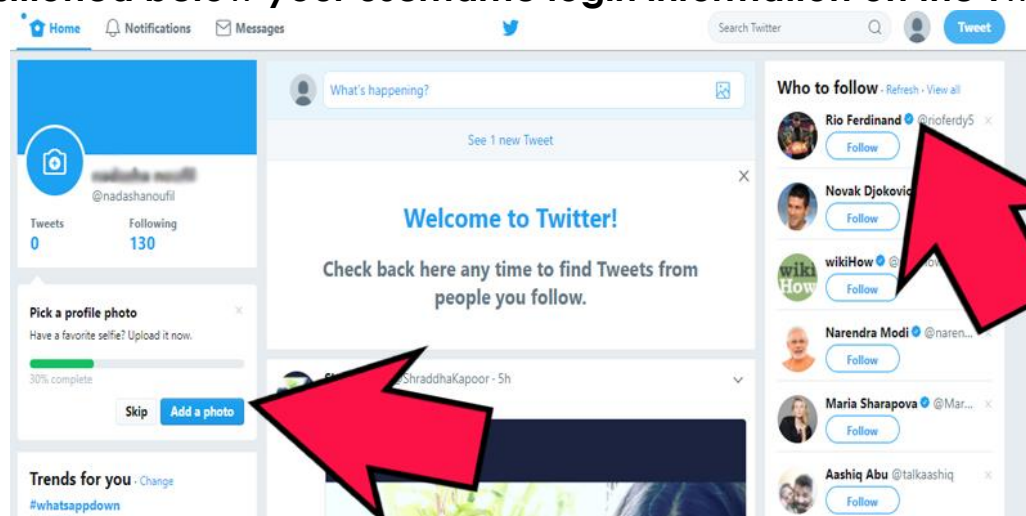

9. Build your list of topics to collaborate on. Click on topics to follow from the Interests box that displays and click "Continue" when finished. Building from a partially-started list will get a network begun on Twitter and can be adjusted later after other topics and users are followed by you.

10. Import your contacts if you'd like. Although Twitter provides a few ways to import your known contacts to become people you follow on Twitter, they use your digital contacts lists and digital address books through your mail services to create the list needed. However, these methods differ, but require you to connect the services to Twitter right from the get-go. You can click "No Thanks" and move along, but try not to not connect any without checking your already-used list of people you know who may have other Twitter accounts

11. Consider adding a profile photo, cover image and various other pieces of information using the interactive form positioned below your username login information on the Twitter homepage.

12. Start following other people. First, Twitter will present you with a list of popular people to follow. Click at least five people to follow and press "Next" when you're done. You'll be presented with another list tailored to the people you chose, and you'll be asked to choose at least five more. You can do so and press "Next" again.

13. Upload your profile picture. Click on the empty profile photo to upload an image of yourself.

14. Write a short bio. Click on the area below your profile photo. Write a short bio about yourself in 160 characters or fewer.

15. Expand your profile. Just click on the "Edit" button that appears to the top right of your profile on your home page. When you edit your profile, you can add more information about yourself in the following ways

- You can change your profile picture anytime.
- You can customize your header photo.
- You can update any information regarding your name, bio, website, and location.
- You can also connect your Twitter account to Facebook by pressing "Connect."
 - Click "Save Changes" when you've finished expanding or changing your profile.

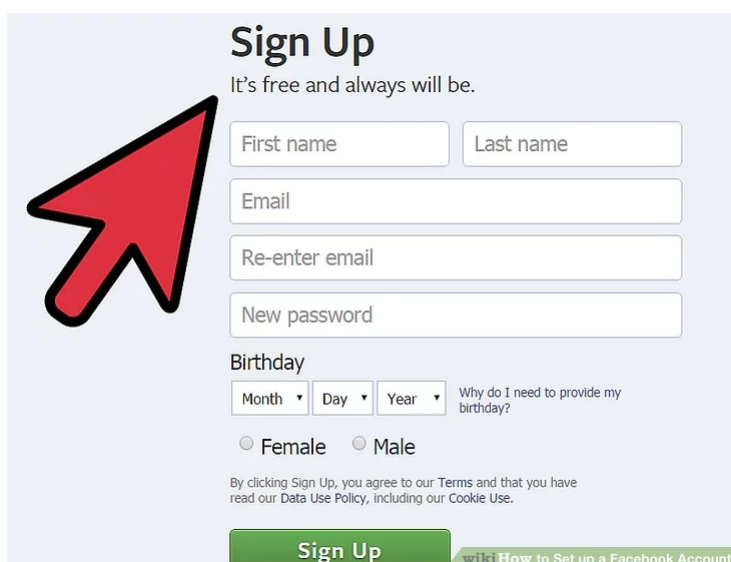

16. Start Tweeting. Now that your account is set up, it's time to start sharing your short-and-sweet thoughts with the world. Just type in a brilliant or witty message and press "Tweet" when you're done.
